Respected leaders, and my fellow guides, good afternoon to you all

As the company leader, it gives me great pride to stand before you today as we complete our journey through Second Class and prepare to step into First Class. This moment isn't just a milestone — it's a celebration of everything we have achieved together, the challenges we've overcome, and the memories we've created along the way.

I want to express my deepest gratitude to every single person who made this journey possible, exciting, and truly unforgettable. None of this would have been meaningful without the dedication, energy, and spirit that each of you brought to our company.

A very special thank you to Wazna Miss, who has been with us from beginning to end. Your guidance, encouragement, and consistent support have played an important role in shaping who we are today. We are truly grateful for your patience and the passion you always bring to our activities.

I would also like to extend my heartfelt thanks to Sodhuma Miss, Shiunee Miss, Shakeela Miss, and Shuheyla Miss for actively participating with us throughout this journey. Your involvement, enthusiasm, and care have inspired us and pushed us to do better every step of the way.

To my fellow guides—thank you for making this entire experience fun, lively, and full of meaning. Each meeting, activity, and challenge became something to look forward to because of the friendships and teamwork we share. You make this company what it is: a place of joy, learning, and support.

As we now move forward into First Class, I am not only proud—I am excited. I look forward to continuing this journey with all of you, growing together, achieving together, and creating even more memories side by side.

Thank you once again to everyone who has been part of this chapter. Let's step into First Class with confidence, unity, and the same spirit that brought us this far.

Thank you.

1. Geopolitical Conflict & War

According to the World Economic Forum's Global Risks Report 2025, state-based armed conflict is one of the top immediate risks.

Ongoing tensions around the world — for example in the Middle East, Eastern Europe, and other strategic regions — are destabilizing economic systems, increasing migration, and putting pressure on global security.

Fragmented trust in institutions and rising geopolitical fragmentation are making global cooperation harder.

2. Climate Change & Environmental Risk

Climate change continues to drive extreme weather, rising temperatures, and environmental degradation.

Water security is becoming more critical: glacier melt, reduced snow cover, and unstable water sources threaten billions of people.

Ecosystem damage, biodiversity loss, and ocean stress are major concerns; at the UN Ocean Conference, leaders emphasized the critical state of marine ecosystems.

Public health is being directly affected: for instance, increased cases of mosquito-borne diseases (like dengue and yellow fever) are linked to climate change.

3. Social Fragmentation, Inequality, and Distrust

The UN's World Social Report (2025) warns that economic insecurity, rising inequality, and declining trust in institutions are creating a "social crisis."

More than a third of the global population lives on very low incomes (e.g., $2.15–$6.85/day), making them vulnerable to shocks.

Misinformation and disinformation are eroding social cohesion and trust in governments.

4. Artificial Intelligence & Technological Risk

The rapid growth of AI brings both promise and peril: while it can fuel innovation, there are serious concerns about governance, job displacement, privacy, and even security risks.

Unregulated AI could lead to wider societal disruption if not matched with strong ethical frameworks.

5. Water Scarcity & Resource Stress

Many regions are facing increasing water stress due to overuse, climate change, and declining water sources.

This scarcity can fuel conflict, threaten food security, and worsen economic inequality
